

Geir Afdal
E-mail: geir.afdal@mf.no

Geir Afdal (1962) is dr.theol. and professor of religious education at MF School of Theology and Østfold University College in Norway. He has been working in teacher education since 1992. His research interests are education, values and religion, as social practices. Afdal has published on issues like tolerance as educational practice and ideal, education as scientific activity, globalization and the 'economization' of education, learning and religion, urban planning and ethics, values and information technology and understandings of context in social research. In LETRA he is coordinating the project and working on theoretical perspectives.

